

a note to say

A LITTLE ABOUT ME AND MY PRACTICE

"Since you're here and you've opened this

I would like to believe believe you're curious

So let me take you through what therapy looks like.

what it looks like with me specifically, and hopefully help reduce some of that decision fatigue.

You might ask, 'What is the goal here?'

To help you find your best fit, not necessarily me, just the right therapist for you."

WHO AM I?

Objectively

Name: Juhi,

Pronouns: she/her

MSc in Clinical Psychology, Christ University, which meant packing up, moving cities, and leaving my comfort zone behind

Based in Mumbai, but I know Bangalore's chaos firsthand too

Subjectively (majorly still figuring it out)

Identifies with the concept of the wounded healer, the idea that the struggles I've lived through, and watched people closest to me live through, aren't separate from my work.
Rather, they enable me to not just cognitively understand, but truly recognise what you might be carrying

A sexual assault survivor

Actively working with a psychosomatic condition

Avid coffee drinker (3-4 cups
a day)

Has a lot of movie opinions

Ethics?

Is my practice ethical, and if yes, how?

Follows the Mental Health Care Act, 2017 and APA and ACA guidelines

Regular supervision, because good therapy definitely happens behind the scenes. I need someone more experienced in my corner too

Been in personal therapy for 2-3 years. I believe in the process I'm asking you to trust

Committed to ongoing upskilling, as the degree was just the start. Therapy functions in the real world, and if the world is dynamic, so must I be Confidentiality: What you say stays between us, and if it ever can't, you'll know exactly why

Informed consent at every step, every action is voluntary, and you'll always know what we're doing and why

Transparency and Boundaries, I promise to tell you what I can do and what might not come most naturally to me, based on my own conditioning and resources

Practice is rooted in what is actually happening in the world, intersectional, present, and aware of how identity, power, and context shape everything that walks into the room in our conversation

WHAT WOULD THERAPY WITH ME LOOK LIKE?

The relationship you and I share will be entirely our own: authentic, subjective, shaped by who we both are as people

Collaboratively, this isn't something I do to you; it's something we do together

Grounded in unconditional positive regard i.e. what you do is separate from who you are. You can bring the whole, unfiltered version of yourself

Mimicking a slice of life, I want to see who you are outside that room, not just who you become inside it

Relational, but also directional, we'll have shared goals mutually agreed on, and we'll follow through on them while staying open to whatever new insights show up along the way

Road trip with a destination decided, but the detours are welcome.

Schools of thought I draw from:
Transactional Analysis · Schema Therapy ·
Narrative Therapy · Gestalt · ACT · Somatic
Therapy

WHO DO I WORK WITH?

The feeling problem: emotional burnout, numbness, confusion, not being able to name what you're feeling, or feeling absolutely everything all at once

The thinking problem: overthinking, decision fatigue, thoughts that won't slow down, or moments where your mind goes completely blank when you need it most

The people problem : relational concerns, attachment patterns, somehow meeting the same kind of person in different bodies, repeatedly (we've all been there)

The self problem (my personal favourite): identity confusion, self-esteem, trauma that makes it hard to understand what has actually happened to you and who you are now because of it

The existential problem: emptiness, disconnection from life, loss of purpose, a quiet but persistent dread that something is missing

LANGUAGES & AVAILABILITY

Languages I work in:

English, Hindi,
and Kutchi

Working days:

Monday,
Wednesday,
Thursday,
Friday & Sunday

Up to 4 sessions
roughly 15-20 slots a week

Session frequency:

I prefer weekly sessions; consistency tends to do the heavy lifting in therapy

Biweekly sessions are also possible, especially when distress levels are high and you need more support

SESSION FEES

Concessional: Rs 500 For students and those with limited financial capacity. Because cost shouldn't be the reason someone can't access care. 3 out of 8 slots are reserved as concessional; that's 40% of my practice, intentionally.

Standard: Rs 800 For those who are able to afford full-fee support. Kept intentional, as I'm early in my practice and want to stay grounded in that.

International: ₹ 1,600 For clients consulting from abroad, to account for currency and context differences.

Cancellation Policy: A 24-hour notice is requested for cancellations — life happens, so emergencies are always understood.

SO YOU WANT TO START THERAPY?

(Here's what that looks like)

Step 1: Reach out Drop me a message. I'll send you an intake form to get us started.

Step 2 : Discovery call A no-pressure conversation to see if we're a good fit for each other. This goes both ways — you're interviewing me too.

Step 3 : Informed consent We go through the consent form together, not just sign it. You'll understand exactly what you're agreeing to.

Step 4 : Lock in a time & begin We find a slot that works, and therapy begins. That's it.

Thank you

Wishing you the best luck in therapy
